The Dentist Who Cured Cancer
By Paul Fassa, NaturalNews – October 15, 2010

During the 1960s, a small town Texas dentist discovered a way to cure his terminal pancreatic cancer; he then proceeded to cure others of all kinds of cancers until the Medical Mafia struck him down. His name was William Donald Kelley, DDS, MS.

His procedure involved diet, heavy pancreatic enzyme dosing, and liver detoxing with coffee enemas. Dr. Kelley died in 2005 at the age of 79. His book, Curing the Incurable covers his therapy.

Kelley's Cancer Victory

When the doctors told Kelley he was about to die from fast spreading and devastating pancreatic cancer, his wife left him with no money and four small children. Kelley’s mother came from Kansas to rescue him.

She threw out all the meats, junk food, cookies and candy that Kelley was addicted to. Then she fed him fresh grains, produce, and fruit, mostly raw. In three months, Kelley was up and about and working again.

That gave him a clue about diet and cancer. He read one of Max Gerson's books on diet and changed his diet forever.

Now he was healthier, but his cancer was still there. So he researched more on his own. Kelley found a book by John Beard, an early 20th Century Scottish embryologist who made the connection of pancreatic enzymes to cancer cells.

Beard noticed that when the fetus begins producing pancreatic enzymes, the placenta stops its cellular growth, and he wondered what that would do to cancer cells. He experimented by injecting cancerous animals and humans with pancreatic juices, and he cured them. Yet, nothing came of his successful experiments.

Kelley needed to try this for himself. He went to the local pharmacy and bought up as many pancreatic enzyme supplements as he could, and he proceeded to take heavy doses. He noticed progress on ridding cancer cells, but then he would get sick. When he stopped dosing, he would recover then proceed again. After dosing again with more cancer cells dying off, he would become ill again.

He realized that he was having Herxheimer or healing crisis reactions. Whenever dead cancer cells and their toxins were released after the enzymes tore up the cancer cell walls, the cancer cells were left vulnerable to the immune system.

So he incorporated daily liver cleanse coffee enemas to get off the Herxheimer roller coaster and became cancer free. Soon, the word spread about Kelley’s miraculous self cure. Cancer patients from all over began flocking to him. His cure rate with all types of cancer was over 50%.

But Kelley was not satisfied. He first realized that many were deficient in enzyme activators produced in the small intestine. So he incorporated activators in some of his enzyme formulas.

Then he discovered that one diet didn’t fit all with his methods. So he created metabolic typing to determine which diet best suits the individual for heavy metabolic proteolytic enzyme dosing. His cure rate went to 93%!
Medical Mafia Clamps Down

Kelley's dental license was suspended for five years when the AMA found out that a dentist was curing cancer. He was even thrown in jail briefly in 1969, forcing Kelley to practice in nearby Mexico.

After his high profile patient actor Steve McQueen died, national media jumped all over Dr. Kelley. He claimed that Steve’s difficult mesothelioma lung cancer was cured, but the actor's insistence on a separate cosmetic surgery in the States led to his death.

Bitter and broken, Kelley called it quits after 20 years of curing thousands with cancer. Ironically, Dr. Nicholas Gonzalez, originally involved with Sloane-Kettering’s effort to debunk Kelley, is praising Kelley and practicing his version of Kelley’s protocol in NYC.
